

If you think Easton matters, this forum is for you

Updated Jan 02, 2019; Posted Mar 10, 2016

Comment

0 shares

By Rudy Miller | For lehighvalleylive.com

historical diane

Sixty years ago Hurricanes Connie and Diane flooded the Delaware River, destroying the free bridge linking Easton and Phillipsburg. (lehighvalleylive.com file photos)

Nurture Nature Center invites Easton residents to weigh in on environmental concerns at a forum coming in April.

The forum at the center at 518 Northampton St. will wrap up the yearlong project "Easton Matters" where researchers surveyed residents, talked to local government officials and hosted focus groups.

The results of the study will be unveiled 6:30 p.m. April 7 at the Nurture Nature Center.

"(The center) is striving to have a productive conversation and seeks to have as many residents attend as possible," said Kate Semmens, who is spearheading the project.

The event will include remarks by the mayor, an overview of the project, and discussion about what environmental issues matter most to residents.

Photos taken by residents of their environmental priorities and concerns will be on display.

Doors open at 6 p.m. with local food and drinks provided.

Reservations are strongly recommended as seating is limited. Please RSVP to share@nurturenaturecenter.org or call 610-253-4432.

Rudy Miller may be reached at rmiller@lehighvalleylive.com. Follow him on Twitter @RudyMillerLV. Find Easton area news on Facebook.